Pharmesthetic Story

Pharmesthetic®

Pharmesthetic not only rediscovered the hidden valuable areas of professional estheticians, but we also realized the need for a new channel that we have never experienced before.

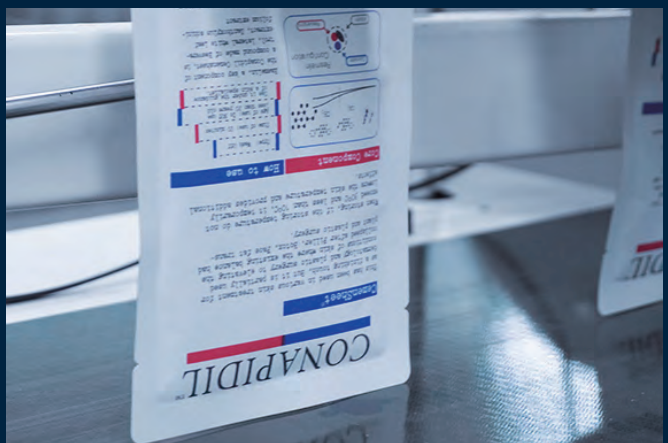

What Pharmesthetic wants to achieve

Pharmesthetic believes that skin and mental health are very closely related. When you have a skin problem, you may be under stress or reluctant to meet people. These symptoms can lead you to social phobia or depression. In the end, it has adverse effects on society.

Pharmesthetic hopes to become a reliable partner that not only makes your skin healthy with our super skin problem solutions, but also cares mental health problems.

We can have affirmative influence on the society.

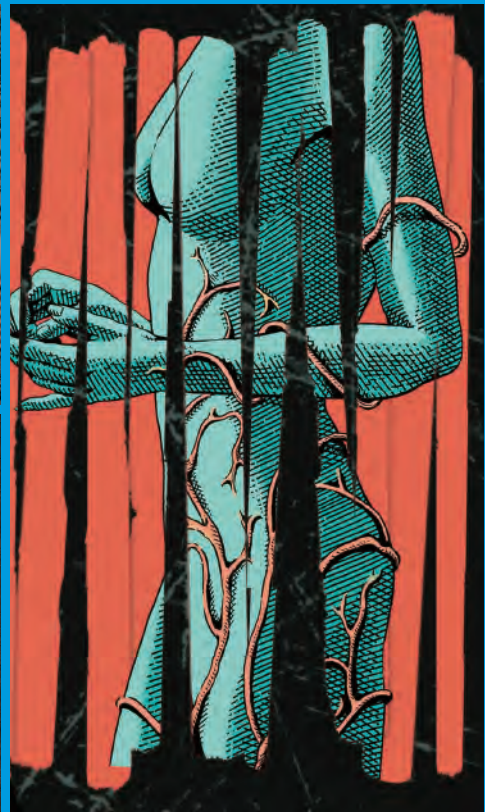

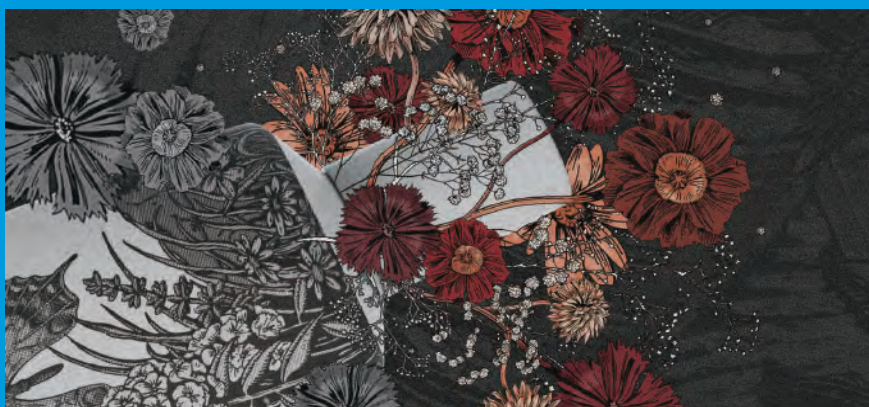

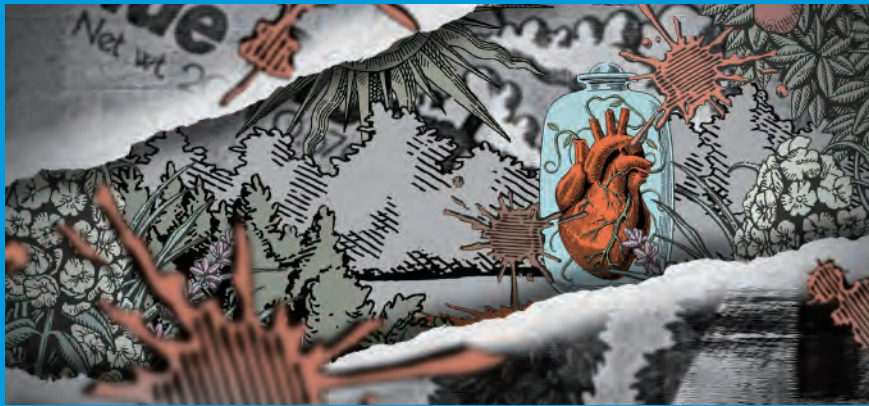

Social Contribution

Our partners, called masters, are participating in the regular monthly sponsorship of Pharmesthetic Korea.

Their donation leads to help regularly the Welfare Foundation supported by Jeanficial Inc. We are trying to dedicate ourselves to benefits all human beings all around the world.

By collaborating with emerging artists, we provide artists with an opportunity to showcase their outstanding talents and give another pleasure to people.

CONAPIDIL™

NON-SURGICAL TREATMENT

The purpose of CONAPIDIL's birth is not making you pretty. Modern people damage their skin and apply a lot of cosmetics to have beautiful skin. This behavior resulted in losing skin immunity. CONAPIDIL aims for the natural beauty of the skin so that it can recover its own health.

SUPERIORITY OF SUPERJECTION RETINOL

INCI NAME : POLYETHOXYLATED RETINAMIDE

Confirmation of improvement to skin wrinkles from vitamin A

Promotion of collagen synthesis in skin from vitamin A

Improvement of Naturally Aged Skin With Vitamin A (Retinol)

Raza Kaji, MD, Hich Shin B. Kwak, MD, Wendy E. Schumacher, BS, Soyun Cho, MD, PhD, Valeria N. Hanft, MD, Ted A. Hamilton, MS, Jany L. King, MS, Jacqueline D. Noll, BSSE, James Varant, PhD, Gary J. Fisher, PhD, John J. Voorhees, MD, FRCP, Seowon Kang, MD

Objective: To evaluate the effectiveness of topical retinol (vitamin A) in improving the clinical signs of naturally aged skin.

Design: Randomized, double-blind, vehicle-controlled, left and right arm comparison study.

Setting: Academic referral center.

Patients: The study population comprised 36 elderly subjects (mean age, 87 years), residing in 2 senior citizen facilities.

Intervention: Topical 0.4% retinol lotion or its vehicle was applied at each visit by study personnel to either the right or the left arm, up to 3 times a week for 24 weeks.

Main Outcome Measures: Clinical assessment using a semiquantitative scale (0, none; 9, most severe) and biochemical measurements from skin biopsy specimens obtained from treated areas.

Results: After 24 weeks, an intent-to-treat analysis using the last-observation-carried-forward method revealed that:

there were significant differences between retinol-treated and vehicle-treated skin for changes in line wrinkling scores (-1.64 [95% CI, -2.06 to -1.22] vs -0.08 [95% CI, -0.17 to 0.01]; $P < .001$). As measured in a sub-group, retinol treatment significantly increased glycosaminoglycan expression ($P = .02$ [$n = 6$]) and procollagen I immunostaining ($P = .049$ [$n = 4$]) compared with vehicle.

Conclusions: Topical retinol improves fine wrinkles associated with natural aging. Significant induction of glycosaminoglycan, which is known to retain subcutaneous water, and increased collagen production are most likely responsible for wrinkle efficacy. With greater skin matrix synthesis, retinol-treated aged skin is more likely to withstand skin injury and ulcer formation along with improved appearance.
